

We All Have Dreams

In America, selective fraternities and quite committees appear to have solidified power.

For centuries power once controlled the masses through various channels, none more important than the media.

The conglomerates of media appear to be note worthy, credible and forthcoming. Many are but there are notable divides in information relayed. For an example, look at CNN and Fox News.

Today conglomerates no longer have an iron-fist control over media as they once did.

The exposure potential and boom of social media has graduated the definition of potential. The once unreachable can now be reached and the lost & forgotten can now be found.

The boom of social media has graduated the definition of potential. The once unreachable can now be reached and the lost or forgotten can now be found.

In America hate it, like it, or love it there are societies within societies amongst America's society.

In life, from an economic standpoint, the majority view the streets as the epicenter of the economic platform.

The living legend Russell Simmons had a hip hop vision that has transcended the urban cultures and all other boundaries to become a global phenomenon.

It is paramount that I show some love to some of our visionaries who continue to excel. There are far too many of you to name so keep in mind I have the utmost respect for the unmentioned just like the mentioned.

I will name Christy & Alice Walton of Walmart, Ms. Oprah Winfrey, Beyoncé Knowles Carter, Laurene Powell Jobs of Apple & Disney, Bill Gates, Warren Buffet, Sean Combs, Shawn Carter, Dr. Dre, Michael Jordan, LeBron James, Earvin "Magic" Johnson, Curtis Jackson, Floyd Mayweather, Evan Sharp & Ben Silbermann of Pinterest HQ, Mark Zuckerberg of Facebook, Evan Spiegel of SnapChat and Aliko Dangste one of Africa's richest men.

To all of you mentioned and unmentioned in the trenches and all other paths to success we appreciate, admire, and recognize you and so many more. In addition, not only do the pies of success look good, we yearn for a slice of the success pie as well.

Globally we have long graduated the do as I say not as I do society. It is extremely difficult trying to tell anyone how to survive good, bad or indifferent. However, what will be even harder is if we lose the values of opportunity.

It is also extremely difficult reaching classes of individuals and the youth that America's society appears to have lost the understanding of.

Today it appears some of our best teachers are those classified as nothing and never going to be nothing.

It is time we assist in elevating Russell Simmons' vision of hip hop that has clearly been the bridge to racial barriers and so much more.

We'll never be able to completely enjoy happiness if we cannot become better equipped to deal with the misunderstood and pain.

Globally the opinion of no individual or entity is too small or too big. Oyez22 is collectively our voice.

To all the social media success stories and up and comers your likes, tags, reposts and various other forms of endorsements are sincerely appreciated.

The Oyez22 family welcomes you. Here's another vehicle of expression to spread your wings.

To everyone, continue to dream big. More importantly, know you can manifest those dreams if only you try. What does open your eyes mean to you?

Written (04/03/16) by Clifton A. Jackson

Your likes, follows, shares, repost of link, tags, and hashtags are sincerely appreciated.

Oyez22

